PAMELA CORLEY is associate professor in the political science department at Southern Methodist University. She received her JD and PhD from Georgia State University. She specializes in judicial politics and American political institutions. Professor Corley is the author of Concurring Opinion Writing on the U.S. Supreme Court (SUNY Press, 2010), which is the first systematic examination of the content of Supreme Court concurrences. She is also the co-author of The Puzzle of Unanimity: Consensus on the United States Supreme Court (Stanford University Press, 2013), which provides the first comprehensive account of how the Court reaches consensus. Her most recent book is entitled When Dissents Matter: Judicial Dialogue through US Supreme Court Opinions (University of Virginia Press, 2023), which presents the first comprehensive study of the effects of dissenting opinions and illuminates which types of dissents successfully influence legal and policy debates, which ones fail to make a difference, and why.

JOSEPH F. KOBYLKA is associate professor and chair of the political science department at Southern Methodist University (SMU). He earned his BA in government and history at Beloit College and his PhD in political science from the University of Minnesota. Since joining the SMU faculty in 1983, he has published three books—The Politics of Obscenity, Public Interest Law: An Annotated Bibliography, and The Supreme Court and Legal Change: Abortion and the Death Penalty—and several journal articles and book chapters. His teaching interests touch on American constitutional law and politics, judicial decision-making, and American political thought. He is currently finishing a biography of former Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun and will then turn to a study of recent church-state litigation. He assisted in developing the award-winning 2007 PBS series The Supreme Court. His “Cycles of American Political Thought”—thirty-six lectures on the development of political philosophy in America—was published by The Teaching Company in late 2006. Selected twice by SMU to give the Opening Convocation Address (2001, 2014) and recipient of four SMU research grants and fellowships, he has also won numerous teaching and service awards at SMU, including the prestigious Altshuler Distinguished Teaching Professor Award. He serves as faculty advisor to the Honor Council, the Political Science Symposium, and Pi Sigma Alpha.

ALYX MARK is assistant professor of government at Wesleyan University and an affiliated scholar of the American Bar Foundation. Her research focuses on how institutions empower and constrain legal elites, such as lawyers, judges, and lawmakers, as well as the consequences of institutional design decisions for access to justice. She is currently engaged in a project supported by the National Science Foundation, the Pew Charitable Trusts, and the American Association of University Women on state court responses to the COVID-19 pandemic, as well as studies of judicial behavior in state civil courts and of current efforts to reform the regulation of the legal profession in the United States. Her work appears in the Law and Society Review, Legislative Studies Quarterly, Political Research Quarterly, The Journal of Law and Courts, Georgetown Law Journal, and the Columbia Law Review, among other outlets. She received her PhD and MA in political science from The George Washington University in 2015 and her BA from Southern Illinois University Edwardsville.

KEVIN T. MCGUIRE is professor of political science at The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where he teaches classes on the U.S. Supreme Court and American constitutional law. He has written and edited several books on the Court and judicial behavior. He is currently a co-author of the college textbook Constitutional Law for a Changing America. In addition, he has published numerous articles on decision-making on the Court. A former Fulbright Scholar at Trinity College, Dublin, he received his bachelor's degree from West Virginia University and his PhD from The Ohio State University.
